Fact That Glynn Was Re-elected for Chairman Is Balm for Own Defeat

Asked at Albany yesterday by a Tribune representative to outline the dominating issue of the campaign this fall Governor Miller said:

"The main thing is to finish up the job that is unfinished. The Governor added that by this he meant the constructive projects and policies inaugurated by the Republicans in the last twenty months. He said the result of the Democratic State Convention at Syracuse quite naturally would have much to do with regard to shaping the course of the campaign, but in the main the Republican drive will be for a continuation of the constructive policies which have characterized the Miller administration.

As already stated in The Tribune, the Governor will be officially notified of his nomination on the night of Tuesday, October 8, at Cooper Union, at which time he will outline the issues. On the following night he will make an address in Kismet Temple, Brooklyn, for Thursday evening, October 10, at which time he will leave in a special car on his up-state tour, speaking at night in Poughkeepsie, it was said. His steady presence in the city the Governor will discuss ways and means at length, and that the development of the Port of New York under the direction of the Port Authority also will be discussed. Power development and fuel and housing matters also will be taken up.

One of Governor Miller's first callers yesterday was Secretary of State John J. Lyons, whose unsuccessful effort to win re-election last year was the last day of the state convention. The meeting was cordial.

"Governor," said the Secretary, as the two grasped hands, "I want to congratulate you on your re-election, and personally assure you that I do not hold any grudge against you for my failure to be re-nominated. I shall do my best to assist in your election and will give you 200 per cent support if such a thing is possible."

"Jack," said the Governor, smiling broadly, "per cent will do."

The two officials briefly discussed the political situation and Mr. Lyons went back to his office.

Secretary Lyons, who says that Governor A. G. Glynn was more to blame for his being rejected by the state convention than any one else, made merry last night over the retirement of chairman Glynn from the state convention.

"Why shouldn't I laugh," said Lyons, "I've got three months to go, while Glynn is out now."

Colonel Lafayette B. Gleason, secretary of the Republican State Committee, had a conference with the Governor, presumably over campaign plans. George K. Morris, of Amsterdam, an active member of the state committee, but he will depend on Colonel Gleason and former Chairman Glynn until he becomes familiar with the new job. Colonel Gleason said that the headquarters of the state committee would stay in Manhattan, with an office also at the Ten Eyck in Albany. It is expected that headquarters staff will be continued.

It is understood that Chairman Morris will reorganize the state executive committee. It is composed of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, chairman; James L. Hotchkiss, of Rochester; Norman J. Gould, of Seneca Falls; Samuel S. Koenig, of Manhattan; F. J. H. Kracke, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Ruth Litt, of Manhattan; Mrs. Henrietta Livermore, of Yonkers; Senator Seymour Lowman, of Elmira; Mrs. Luther W. Mott, of Oswego; Mrs. Douglas Robinson, of Albany; Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, of Manhattan; William A. Glenn, of Albany; William L. Ward, of Port Chester; John G. Wiekser, of Buffalo, and Miss Florence Wardwell, of Oswego County.

An offer to be $5,000 against $5,000 that Governor Miller will be re-elected in November providing that former Governor Smith is the opposing candidate, was made yesterday by W. L. Darnell & Co., of 44 Broad Street. There was no takers.

Lunn, former Socialist and Mayor of Schenectady, was nominated for Lieutenant Governor. Dr. Royal S. Hearst is believed to have had a chance out of the state ticket was as follows:

State Treasurer—George K. Schuler, of Lyons, Wayne County.

Hearst Leaders Flee City

The Hearst boom for Governor collapsed like a punctured balloon early this morning. To-night Charles F. Murphy in a speech assembled named a slate which contained not a single name that Hearst either suggested or approved.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the Hearst leaders, consisting of William J. Conners, Mayor Hyman and Joseph A. Moore, convinced that the fight had been lost, inconspicuously fled the city, leaving the boss to name Alfred E. Smith as his choice for Governor. It was the uncompromising attitude of Smith that made this result possible. His steady refusal to run on the same ticket with his chief enemy finally forced Murphy to surrender. Had Smith wavered for a single instant the editor would have been put on the ticket as United States Senator.

But Smith stood pat. And in the wee small hours of the night he convinced that there could be no compromise abandoned his efforts to secure harmony at any price and consented to the terms imposed by the former Governor.

Smith's victory is not only a victory over Hearst. It is a defeat of Murphy, who in his twenty years of leadership has rarely been beaten—compelled to accept the terms of any man in his following.

Hearst's Stand a Mystery

What Hearst will do is still a mystery, but one which does not apparently trouble Murphy, and which has rarely been regarded as a menace to his chances for reelection.

A William J. Conners, who has spent all of his time and much of his money in promoting the editor's chances, heard the decision of the Tammany boss shortly after luncheon to-day. His comment was:

"Well, we're a cheerful lot of suckers, ain't we?"

For three days Murphy has set solemnly in Room 222 in the Onondaga receiving the faithful and the suggestions of the faithful. Never once has he seen himself. Shortly after midnight this Friday morning he consented to send word that he was pleased to have the ex-Governor nominated to accept Hearst as a running mate on the ticket as a nominee for State.

Smith promptly sent back the reply that if Hearst was nominated he, Smith, would not be a candidate. The next few hours and minutes after that he told his friends that Smith was disinterested and needed disciplining.

A recrudescence of light, however, brought the copy of a telegram from Hearst, and through the portals of the throne room came the word that Smith could have his own way.

Thereafter the making up of the remainder of the slate was the boss's only concern. He had the work completed by the time the convention assembled in its final session to-night.

For the first time since he has been in Syracuse Murphy condescended to attend the convention, where he sat at the head of his hunched delegation, and glowered grimly as his will gates obediently carried out his will.

Hearst Quits With Threat

Murphy may or may not have been moved to this mood of satisfaction by the copy of a telegram handed him by one of his satellites shortly after he completed an ample and satisfactory luncheon.

The telegram bore the signature of William Randolph Hearst and was addressed to him at his home in New York City.

Favorite Dies on Way to Post, But Bets Are Held Binding

Despite all this there was no official reckoning of the accident, and the officials allowing the field to start without taking time out for the making of a new book, and every cent that the favorite was practically a gift to the bookmaker. The horse never reached the barrier.

Bookmakers and players engaged in every squabble, but the ruling of the Jockey Club, which was passed about settled the question—against the players. The rule reads: "Every horse shall be considered having started so long as he is in the race, and he shall be considered having won if he is in the race when the race is declared off." The first race was altogether a peculiar affair. The Quincey Stable's Poor won away from front, but a ventruse and Bonfire, which finished second and third respectively, were disqualified for a jam that occurred in the race around the turn. This placed Dick's Daughter second and the 197 a dead outsider, third.

Firemen and Police Rescue Many From Roof of Up-Town Building

At least nine persons were injured or overcome by smoke early this morning in a fire which started on the second floor of the six-story apartment building at 241 West 109th Street, near Broadway.

The fire started at 1:15 o'clock and spread rapidly throughout the upper stories of the building. Firemen and policemen who arrived there a few minutes later went up the fire escape to the roof and rescued many persons who had gone there for safety. Six children were injured, some of them seriously, in jumping out of windows on the second and third floors. They were taken to St. Luke's and to Knickerbocker hospitals.

Twenty minutes after the blaze started flames came out of the burning building two women and a man who were rushed in an ambulance to Knickerbocker Hospital. It was said the man was perhaps fatally burned.

News of the destruction by fire at sea of the schooner Madeleine Constance, off St. Johns, N. F., was received last night in a wireless message to the naval communication offices from the steamship Mauretania. Members of the crew were saved.

A message was sent by the steamship Joseph Reef, and had been relayed by the Mauretania. It was as follows:

"Encountered schooner Madeleine Constance, off St. Johns, N. F., after abandoned in latitude 48.03 north, longitude 37.05 west. Crew taken off by auxiliary boat of 218 gross tons, left Rotterdam for St. Johns August 18, but was delayed a week at Portsmouth, England, for engine and rigging repairs. The vessel was built in 1895 and was the property of Job Brothers, of St. John's, Newfoundland, and was a dead outsider, third."

Edwards Puts State Police On Hall Case

Assures Charlotte Mills Entire Power of Office Will Be Used to Detect Slayer of Her Mother

Autopsy Shows 3 Bullet Wounds

Prosecutor Admits No Thorough Examination Was Made Before Burial

By Boyden Sparkes

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Justification for the charge of official bungling of the investigation of the Hall-Mills murder was found to-day when a belated autopsy was performed on the body of Mrs. Eleanor Mills. Afterward Prosecutor Azariah M. Beckman, of Somerset County, admitted that he had never ordered County Physician William Long to perform autopsies on either of the bodies.

To-night, presumably after Governor Edwards at Jersey City had learned these facts, he wrote a letter in reply to one from Charlotte Mills, daughter of the murdered child singer, in which he said he was placing the entire state police at the disposal of the prosecutors to aid them in tracking down the murderer of her mother. Charlotte had visited the Governor's office in Jersey City during the afternoon, but did not see Governor Edwards. She talked with his secretary and the letter was written some time after the high school had started back to New Brunswick.

Doctor Explains

Prosecutor Beckman's admission was made after Dr. Long said:

"I was never asked to perform an autopsy on either of the bodies. I was asked to perform an examination of the external wounds. I take my report on the condition of the bodies."

When this was repeated to Mr. Beckman he said:

"Well, I never gave Dr. Long any instructions about this case. I suppose that Detective George Totten gave what instructions he received."

Nevertheless for two weeks Dr. Long, in a series of interviews, has given newspaper men the definite impression that he did perform an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Mills. He has said that he did not make such a thorough examination of Dr. Hall's body because there was no one around who had been with him at the time of the murder. On one of these occasions he volunteered the information that he had performed five hundred autopsies and therefore knew what he was talking about.

Open Grave by Night

It was 2 o'clock this morning when a group of grave diggers and detectives went to the low mound of earth that marked the burial spot of Mrs. Mills in Van Liew Cemetery. They worked swiftly by lantern light, speaking only in whispers. Long before day break they had dug the coffin from the grave and taken it to the underground establishment of Coroner John V. Hubbard.

At 8:30 o'clock this morning Prosecutor Beckman, detectives of both Somerset and Essex counties, gathered to perform the autopsy. The physicians were Dr. Runkle F. Hageman, of Somerville; Dr. L. A. Smith, of New Brunswick; Dr. Long, County Physician of Somerset, and Dr. E. I. Cronk, Health Officer of New Brunswick.

It was Dr. Cronk's statement that there were three bullet wounds in Mrs. Mills' head. He pointed to the attention of investigators to the supposed autopsy of Dr. Long. He had said repeatedly that there was only one wound in Mrs. Mills' body, and that was at the top of her forehead, midway between the eyes. Dr. Cronk had made his examination of the bodies at the behest of the family of the murdered clergyman.

Neck Nearly Severed

Dr. Cronk's statement was completely justified by the autopsy. The physicians learned that one bullet had entered the woman's forehead at the level of her hair, and had penetrated her skull that was discovered to-day. A second bullet had passed through the right cheek and lodged in the brain tissue. A third bullet penetrated the right temple region above the ear, passed through the skull and had raised a lump on the scalp below the left ear. In the but not first of the three wounds was a fourth wound, that might have been made by a spent bullet. It had penetrated to the teeth. It had suggested the theory that it was a bullet that had penetrated the play, through the clergyman's head.

A studious examination of the wound in Mrs. Mills' throat revealed what was described as a necklace impression.

Assures Charlotte Mills Entire Power of Office Will Be Used to Detect Slayer of Her Mother

Autopsy Shows 3 Bullet Wounds

Prosecutor Admits No Thorough Examination Was Made Before Burial

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 29.—Justification for the charge of official bungling of the investigation of the Hall-Mills murder was found to-day when a belated autopsy was performed on the body of Mrs. Eleanor Mills. Afterward Prosecutor Azariah M. Beckman, of Somerset County, admitted that he had never ordered County Physician William Long to perform autopsies on either of the bodies.

To-night, presumably after Governor Edwards at Jersey City had learned these facts, he wrote a letter in reply to one from Charlotte Mills, daughter of the murdered child singer, in which he said he was placing the entire state police at the disposal of the prosecutors to aid them in tracking down the murderer of her mother. Charlotte had visited the Governor's office in Jersey City during the afternoon, but did not see Governor Edwards. She talked with his secretary and the letter was written some time after the high school had started back to New Brunswick.

Doctor Explains

Prosecutor Beckman's admission was made after Dr. Long said:

"I was never asked to perform an autopsy on either of the bodies. I was asked to perform an examination of the external wounds. I take my report on the condition of the bodies."

When this was repeated to Mr. Beckman he said:

"Well, I never gave Dr. Long any instructions about this case. I suppose that Detective George Totten gave what instructions he received."

Nevertheless for two weeks Dr. Long, in a series of interviews, has given newspaper men the definite impression that he did perform an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Mills. He has said that he did not make such a thorough examination of Dr. Hall's body because there was no one around who had been with him at the time of the murder. On one of these occasions he volunteered the information that he had performed five hundred autopsies and therefore knew what he was talking about.

Open Grave by Night

It was 2 o'clock this morning when a group of grave diggers and detectives went to the low mound of earth that marked the burial spot of Mrs. Mills in Van Liew Cemetery. They worked swiftly by lantern light, speaking only in whispers. Long before day break they had dug the coffin from the grave and taken it to the underground establishment of Coroner John V. Hubbard.

At 8:30 o'clock this morning Prosecutor Beckman, detectives of both Somerset and Essex counties, gathered to perform the autopsy. The physicians were Dr. Runkle F. Hageman, of Somerville; Dr. L. A. Smith, of New Brunswick; Dr. Long, County Physician of Somerset, and Dr. E. I. Cronk, Health Officer of New Brunswick.

It was Dr. Cronk's statement that there were three bullet wounds in Mrs. Mills' head. He pointed to the attention of investigators to the supposed autopsy of Dr. Long. He had said repeatedly that there was only one wound in Mrs. Mills' body, and that was at the top of her forehead, midway between the eyes. Dr. Cronk had made his examination of the bodies at the behest of the family of the murdered clergyman.

Neck Nearly Severed

Dr. Cronk's statement was completely justified by the autopsy. The physicians learned that one bullet had entered the woman's forehead at the level of her hair, and had penetrated her skull that was discovered to-day. A second bullet had passed through the right cheek and lodged in the brain tissue. A third bullet penetrated the right temple region above the ear, passed through the skull and had raised a lump on the scalp below the left ear. In the but not first of the three wounds was a fourth wound, that might have been made by a spent bullet. It had penetrated to the teeth. It had suggested the theory that it was a bullet that had penetrated the play, through the clergyman's head.

A studious examination of the wound in Mrs. Mills' throat revealed what was described as a necklace impression.

6 Children Hurt, 3 Adults Burned in Apartment Fire

Firemen and Police Rescue Many From Roof of Up-Town Building

At least nine persons were injured or overcome by smoke early this morning in a fire which started on the second floor of the six-story apartment building at 241 West 109th Street, near Broadway.

The fire started at 1:15 o'clock and spread rapidly throughout the upper stories of the building. Firemen and policemen who arrived there a few minutes later went up the fire escape to the roof and rescued many persons who had gone there for safety. Six children were injured, some of them seriously, in jumping out of windows on the second and third floors. They were taken to St. Luke's and to Knickerbocker hospitals.

Twenty minutes after the blaze started flames came out of the burning building two women and a man who were rushed in an ambulance to Knickerbocker Hospital. It was said the man was perhaps fatally burned.
